Thanks to the foresight of previous trustees LineTrust South Canterbury will retain its shares in Alpine Energy for the foreseeable future. In 2002 the trustees, under the chairmanship of Alister France, obtained a High Court order extending the term of the Trust to eighty years. Prior to this the term of the Trust was limited to a few years, after which the shares would have been distributed and the consumers at large would have lost a vital asset. The process of obtaining the order was prolonged and contentious but finally had the overwhelming support of the vast majority of the consumers.

Alister retired as a director of Alpine Energy last month, having served nine years on the board. He has been one of the two directors appointed by the current trustees of LTSC. Alister has been an active director, often to be seen in the field checking the nuts and bolts of our widespread network. In his reports to the trustees he has always been mindful of the long term sustainability of the Company and the security of South Canterbury's power supply. As trustees, we wholeheartedly thank Alister for his long service as both trustee and director and wish him well for the future.

Jessie Chan-Dorman

In order to find a successor we engaged professional recruitment firm Sheffields. Their advertising resulted in 64 applicants. Your trustees interviewed a short list of five, and finally appointed Jessie Chan-Dorman as a director of Alpine Energy. Jessie has extensive experience in governance and management especially in the rural sector. She received the Canterbury Institute of Directors Aspiring Director Award in 2014 and Dairy Woman of the Year 2017. She will join Rick Ramsay, LTSC's other appointed director. Your trustees look forward to working with Jessie and Rick on behalf of all our consumer/ shareholders and the future security of our power supply.
